FlightWorks Adds Super Mid Jet to Executive Fleet: The Challenger 300

FlightWorks Continues to Lead in Domestic and International Charter and Management Services

Atlanta (May 16, 2006)

FlightWorks, a leading provider of private aviation solutions, recently added a Challenger 300 to its fleet of executive business jets. Since January of this year, FlightWorks has added 10 aircraft, continuing its expansion and ability to better serve the charter and management segments of business aviation. The FlightWorks fleet is now in excess of 30 aircraft.

The Bombardier Challenger 300 is based in Tulsa, Oklahoma, KTUL.

The 300 will be managed under the company's FlightWise management program. FlightWorks' new aircraft management program provides dedicated owner service specialists to manage owner travel, records management, maintenance and aircraft charter.

The Challenger 300 is the one of the most technically advanced super-midsize jets in production. With seating for up to eight passengers, the Challenger 300 has been designed to maximize passenger comfort and provide a productive work environment. In addition, the 300 offers luxurious amenities normally found on much larger aircraft. The jet offers a range of 3,500 statute miles at speeds up to 530 mph. "We're excited about the addition of this super-mid aircraft to our fleet" said Ron Smith, Vice President of Business Development for FlightWorks. "The Challenger 300 enhances travel options for our customers and continues our strategy of offering one of the most modern and diverse business jet fleets in the industry" said Smith.

This Midwest based jet is a sophisticated, high-performance business jet with true U.S. coast-to-coast range. Uncompromising and unlimited in both comfort and business capabilities, the Challenger 300 has the best performance in its class, with incomparable room to conference and work or just relax. The well-appointed cabin interior includes a telephone system, 2 large bulkhead monitors, an in-flight mapping system, a CD/DVD player and 4 electrical outlets. With an in-flight accessible baggage compartment, comfortable club seating, and an elegantly appointed forward galley, this jet is well-suited for a relaxing vacation or an efficient business trip.
