Atlanta, GA (July 17, 2006)– FlightWorks announced today that Greg Kinsella, a veteran of the business aviation industry and most recently Mid Atlantic Regional Sales Manager, has been named General Manager of Flightworks' Manassas, Virginia Executive Terminal and Hanger. FlightWorks Manassas facility at Manassas Regional Airport/Harry P. Davis Field (KHEF) serves the Greater Washington DC and Mid Atlantic markets. As General Manager, Kinsella's responsibilities will include facility management and operations as well as aircraft management and charter sales development.

According to Scott Beale, President and CEO of FlightWorks, Kinsella is charged with leading and coordinating all activities and operations in this growing market for the company. FlightWorks is a leading provider of executive jet management services as well as one of the nations largest charter operators with a fleet of over 30 business jets and helicopters.

"Our business in the Mid Atlantic market has quickly developed to the point that we need an experienced executive like Greg to head up our operations there," said Beale. "Greg is an accomplished professional in the industry and we are delighted that he has agreed to broaden his responsibilities at FlightWorks as we strive to enhance our existing business and explore new market opportunities in the Mid-Atlantic and North East market segments."

Kinsella brings more than 15 years of aircraft sales, marketing, and business management experience to this position. "FlightWorks has an established reputation as one of the country's leading aircraft management and executive jet charter operators, so I am very happy to take on the challenge of leading the growth of our business in the Mid Atlantic market," said Kinsella. "We see an opportunity for growth in all segments of the market from aircraft management and direct charter to block charter and customized programs for government services. I look forward to working with our talented employees and loyal strategic partners to provide exceptional business aviation solutions and services to our clientele in this fast-paced market."
